Historic Gem

THESE WORLDLY HOMEOWNERS love returning home and relaxing in their own historic cottage, but they were tired of the limitations of its original design. When designer Haskell Matheny, ASID, first saw this outdated kitchen, it consisted of one small section of cabinetry, a refrigerator and stove on a separate wall, and not much else. The couples' requirements were simple yet daunting: create a fully functional kitchen with an eat-in area for four, lots of storage, top-of-the-line appliances, and their unique ascetic—all within the original footprint.

To break up the workflow in such a small place, Matheny used the new table as the center point for this revamped space. This addition provides eat-in seating, serving space, and extra counter space. Once the table was in place, the layout consisted of an efficient U-shaped workspace with a custom buffet storage and display at the opposite end of the kitchen. Matheny utilized space under the staircase to create a built-in coffee and tea center complete with storage.

As for style, Matheny chose a classic combination of white, gray, and silver. This created an elegant, sophisticated background and allowed all the clients' colorful and eclectic possessions to take center stage. Learn more about this designer at www.haskellinteriors.com. «
